Accidentals apply to the whole measure (only to the octave in which they are given), though reminder accidentals are given frequently.

In the vocal part:

dashed vertical lines connecting a note and a word indicate that the note and the word should be lined up approximately (the word could occur several beats before or after the note)

dashed vertical lines before a word indicate that the word should come after the note the line is attached to solid vertical lines connecting a note and a word indicate that the note and the word should be lined up precisely

For ease of alignment, the percussionist, rather than the narrator, could speak the words which are rhythmically notated.

 Score in C

Thai Folktale, adapted by Emily Doolittle

Emily Doolittle, 2005

The musical score consists of two systems of music. The first system starts with a tempo of  $\text{♩} = 108$ . It features four parts: Narrator (like bells), Clarinet (B♭), Viola, and Percussion (vibraphone). The second system begins at measure 7, indicated by a vertical bar with the number 7 above it. It continues with the same four parts: Narrator, Clarinet, Viola, and Percussion. The score uses common time signatures (4/4, 3/4, 2/4) and includes dynamic markings such as  $mf$  and  $mff$ .

Musical score for orchestra and percussion. The score consists of four staves: Nar (oboe), Clarinet (cl), Violin (vla), and Percussion (perc). The time signature changes throughout the measures. Measure 25 starts in 5/4, followed by 6/4, 7/4, and 4/4. The Nar and cl play eighth-note patterns. The vla and perc play sixteenth-note patterns. Dynamics include  $p$  (piano) and  $f$  (forte). The score ends with a instruction "take tambourine".

Long ago, it was not the parrot which humans kept as a household companion, but the crow.

The crow was quick and bright, and could easily repeat human words.

What's more, he could use human language to express his own thoughts.

Human and crow passed their days in lively conversation. One was seldom seen without the other.

Musical score for orchestra and percussion, page 82. The score includes parts for Nar, Clarinet (cl), Violin (vla), and Percussion (perc). The Nar part consists of a single sustained note. The cl and vla parts play eighth-note patterns with dynamic markings "piu f" and "mf". The perc part plays a pattern of eighth-note crosses with dynamic marking "mf". The score concludes with a ritardando instruction: "rit. (to approx. ♩ = 132 in m. 91)". Measure numbers 1 through 10 are indicated above the staves.

[PAGE TURN]

Time passed, and crow became comfortable living in the wild. Though the pain of the betrayal never left him entirely, he thought less and less often of his life among humans.

One day, he saw a new bird in the forest.
She was brilliant green and red, and sang a song crow had never heard before.
I am parrot, she said.
"I speak the language of humans, and have come from far away to be their companion."

"Welcome", said crow, "but please heed my warning.
I, too, speak human language, and for many years was human's favourite friend."

A musical score page featuring four staves. The top staff is for the Narrator (nar), marked with a tempo of 424 and dynamic pmp. The second staff is for the Clarinet (cl), marked with dynamic ppp. The third staff is for the Violin (vla), marked with dynamic pp. The bottom staff is for the Percussion (perc). The vocal line for the Narrator includes lyrics: "Humans housed me and gave me food, and we were together all our waking hours." The score is set against a background of dashed diagonal lines.
